Bering Yachts working on a Bering 70 Passagemaker

Bering Yachts, specialists in hardy and tough expedition and trawler yachts, is currently working on the construction of a new Bering 70 passagemaker. This luxury motoryacht is actually being worked on in Antalya, Turkey. One of the first aspects of the yacht that strikes impression immediately is the modern design and optimized bow and hull. The design is modern and has two internal guest decks, main and lower decks with an open air deck that features a secondary helm station.

A number of parameters were conjured when designing the new Bering 70 yacht. Some of them included ability to present smooth and tolerable motion even in the roughest conditions. Relatively shallow draft that allows easy navigation through rivers or approaches to beaches and coves. The mast can rotate down through 90-degrees to reduce the yacht's air draft in case of passage under short bridges. The very efficient and easily driven hull form requiring only the utilization of low power engines to give excellent fuel economy. Also, the smart use of space onboard to make the vessel feel larger than it is, to aid in comfort for extended cruises or the live-aboard owner. Finally, it had to take into account the use of green-technologies, in the systems and machinery.
