SUCCESSFUL HULL TURNING FOR SECOND BERING 70

With three yachts under construction, and many other projects on the drawing board, the Bering shipyard is working at full speed.

The steel-work on Bering 70 was completed using the overturned construction technique, a boat building method which allows for greater precision for vessels built in steel and aluminum. The next step in the construction, after successfully turning the hull, is mounting the aluminum superstructure, once completed.

B70 benefits from a modern design, multiple innovations and considerable attention to detail. Her distinctive hull shape is designed to cut through the water and will be less affected by oncoming waves than a bow with more flare.

As well as all the other Berings, B70 is also a semi-custom built boat. Once completed, her displacement will be 124,000 lbs. (62 tons) she will have a range of 2,500 nm at a cruising speed of 8 knots, and will be able to reach a maximum speed of 12 knots.

Delivery of B70 Apsara is scheduled for spring 2018.
